

ProQuest Historical Periodicals

Allows Users to Take a Deeper Dive Into the Past Using Over Three Centuries of Historical Journals and Magazines All at the Click of a Button

ProQuest Historical Periodicals contains material from a number of major product lines, covering some key categories of historical serial content. It includes hundreds of scholarly journal archives from Periodicals Archive Online, the large, eclectic collections of historical popular periodicals from American Periodicals and British Periodicals, and three thematic consumer/trade magazine backfile collections – Education Magazine Archive, Religious Magazine Archive, and News, Policy & Politics Magazine Archive.

Access to ProQuest Historical Periodicals allows users to access upwards of 36 million pages of primary source material. This comprehensive collection includes some of the most significant magazines of their time, such as Newsweek, The Spectator, New Statesman, and The Tatler. It also gives researchers access to some of the most in-demand content used by faculty in their research and teaching. Did you know that our Top 10 Periodicals Archive Online journals were cited 2.3x more than New York Times? Similarly, Education Magazine Archive had the most frequently referenced content among ProQuest consumer/trade magazine archives, with these titles cited more than The Washington Post, The Guardian, and The Observer! From 2008–June 2018, over 260,256 dissertations or scholarly articles on the ProQuest platform cited material from these databases.

To talk to the sales department, contact us at 1-800-779-0137 or sales@proquest.com.

Why purchase the ProQuest Historical Collection?

- Core, high-demand primary source materials, including scholarly journal archives, historical periodicals, and trade and consumer magazine backfiles, which allows for a broader and deeper dive into many of the key events, figures, attitudes, and ideas from over three centuries of history.
- Page-image digitization allows researchers to view articles and images in their original context. Article-level index records and searchable text allow users quickly to navigate this wealth of material.
- Heavily used in research, cross-disciplinary. The material in ProQuest Historical Periodicals is well-used by researchers at all levels. With content relevant to subjects across the the arts, humanities, and social sciences and spanning three centuries of coverage, it has applications for a vast range of research topics.
- ProQuest One Academic customers who subscribe to ProQuest Historical Periodicals can search all of this material together in the ProQuest One Academic environment. It can also be subscribed to by customers who do not have access to ProQuest One Academic, however, and has its own interface.
- Access from any location or device!

What's included:

- Periodicals Archive Online 1–10
- American Periodicals (American Periodicals Series Online + American Periodicals from the Center for Research Libraries)
- British Periodicals 1–4
- Education Magazine Archive
- Religious Magazine Archive
- News, Policy & Politics Magazine Archive

That equals over 36 million pages; 25 million documents; 3,000+ publications; with coverage from 1681–2015, that can be accessed from anywhere.

Speak to your Sales Specialist for more information about this new collection from ProQuest!

proquest.com

To talk to the sales department, contact us at 1-800-779-0137 or sales@proquest.com.

DIVERSITY, EQUITY AND INCLUSION (DEI) CASE STUDY

ProQuest Historical Periodicals supports key contemporary interests and priorities in research, such as the study of topics in Diversity, Equity and Inclusion, offering indispensable historical contexts. The following sample articles indicate how this material could be used, for example, in the study of police brutality towards ethnic minorities.

Some Case Study Articles

Police Disperse Inter-racial Dance Of Cleveland Young Socialists. (1930, May 31). New Leader with which is Combined the American Appeal, 10, 2. Contemporary report in The New Leader of a police inspector ordering musicians and dancers to leave the hall at an "Inter-Racial Dance" in 1930.

Blacks and the police. (1979, Mar 22). New Society, 47, 663. An article considering the aftermath of racial tensions in London's east end in 1978.

The police force we deserve? (1999, Feb 26). New Statesman (1996), 128, 8. Article in New Statesman considering the recently-published Macpherson Report, an enquiry into the killing of the black British teenager Stephen Lawrence, which concluded that there was widespread institutional racism in Britain's police forces.

Poly staff boycott Hendon racism inquiry. (1983). The Times Higher Education Supplement, (535), 5. A report about higher education lecturers boycotting enquiry into alleged racism among police cadets at a police training school.

And much more!

